

Credit report review checklist

Once you get your credit report, you will want to review it carefully. Ordering it is not enough—you have to read it. Credit reports may have mistakes. And if there are mistakes, you are the only one who is likely to find them.

Use the following worksheet to review each section of your credit report. Do this for each credit report you get throughout the year. Then, keep the completed checklist with your credit report.

Your credit report contains a lot of personal and financial information. Be sure to keep any hard copies of your credit reports in a safe and secure place. If you do not want to hang on to your credit reports, be sure to shred them before getting rid of them.

If you find something wrong with your credit report, you should dispute it. You may contact both the credit reporting company and the creditor or institution that provided the information. Explain what you think is wrong and why.

To correct mistakes, it can help to contact both the credit reporting company and the source of the mistake. You may file a dispute not only with the credit reporting company, but also directly with the source of the information, and include the same supporting documentation. However, there are certain circumstances where creditors and furnishing institutions are not required to investigate.

You may file your dispute online at each credit reporting agency's website.

If you file a dispute by mail, your dispute letter should include: Your complete name, address, and telephone number; your report confirmation number (if you have one); and the account number for any account you may be disputing.

In your letter, clearly identify each mistake, state the facts, explain why you are disputing the information, and request that it be removed or corrected. You may want to enclose a copy of the portion of your report that contains the disputed items and circle or highlight the disputed items. Include copies (not originals) of documents that support your position.

Send your letter of dispute to credit reporting companies by certified mail, return receipt requested, so that you will have a record that your letter was received. You can contact the nationwide credit reporting companies online, by mail, or by phone:

 Keep copies of your dispute letter and enclosures.*

If you suspect that the error on your report is a result of identity theft, visit the Federal Trade Commission's IdentityTheft.gov website for information about identity theft and steps to take if you have been victimized. This will include filing a fraud alert and possibly filing a security freeze.

If the error is with a specific account, you can also choose to start the process by contacting the creditor or the debt collector to resolve the dispute.

Whether you file your dispute directly with the creditor (information furnisher) or the credit reporting agency, they generally have 30 - 45 days to investigate your claim and 5 days to send you written notice once their investigation is over.

If the dispute results in a business changing the information it reported about you, the business must notify the credit reporting agencies. And vice versa, if you filed your dispute with a credit reporting agency, it must fix your file and notify the creditor of the error.

You can also submit a complaint to the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau at consumerfinance.gov/complaint or by calling 855-411-2372.

Steps to filing a dispute checklist

Steps to filing a dispute

- 1. Write a letter to the credit bureau that sent you the report.
- 2. Provide the account number for the item you feel is not accurate.
- 3. For each item, explain concisely why you believe it is not accurate.
- 4. If you can, include copies of bills or cleared checks (money order stubs) that show you have paid them on time.
- 5. Provide your address and telephone number at the end of the letter so the credit bureau can contact you for more information if necessary.
- 6. Make a copy of your letter before you send it to the credit bureau.
- 7. Send the letter. You may choose to use Certified Mail with Return Receipt to have proof of when the letter was received. The consumer reporting agency or the creditor generally has 30-45 days to investigate your claim.

Example letter

You can use this example dispute letter from the Federal Trade Commission to a credit reporting agency as a guide for writing your own letter.

Be sure to keep copies of everything you send to the credit reporting agencies, including the dates you sent the items.
